Essay writing

An opening paragraph of an essay functions as the writer's game plan. It is usually the guide that will determine and control the rest of the essay. It should attract the reader's attention and focus on the problem or topic of discussion. The transition from one paragraph to the next should be done in such a way that the reader is reminded of the direction of the writer's thought. You can use first, second, third etc. and conclude the essay with finally, that is the word that will denote that the essay is about to end. A good essay will connect the paragraphs as a bridge from the beginning to the end. The concluding paragraph, the one that ends the essay, gives the writer an opportunity to restate the main idea of the essay.

For example, if you are writing an essay on Environment then you can start by writing how everything on this earth falls under the environment and how its disbalance has wreaked havoc on the ecosystems.

restate the main idea of the essay.

For example, if you are writing an essay on Environment then you can start by writing how everything on this earth falls under the environment and how its disbalance has wreaked havoc on the ecosystems. Therefore the need to preserve the environment is of utmost importance for life to survive on earth.

The next paragraph may start with what all activities led to endangering the environment, thereby destroying the ecosystems which is making extinction inevitable for certain life forms, ex- turtles are gradually becoming extinct,tigers have to be preserved, etc

The next paragraph will take up from this point and dwell on the steps that have already started to be taken and how effective they are.

The concluding paragraph will pick up all the points made above in a nutshell and stress how important it is to conserve the environment.
